Commentary

During the third quarter 2024, the Axiom Emerging Markets World Equity Strategy ("Strategy") underperformed MSCI EM Index ("Index") net of fees. The Strategy has outperformed the Index on a net of fees basis over the year-to-date, 1-year, 5-year, 10-year, and since inception periods.

Several sharp global equity market rotations impacted Axiom's portfolio this quarter. Semiconductor related stocks, which led markets through the first half of the year, corrected during the quarter primarily due to uncertainty regarding the timing of the release of Nvidia's next generation chips, further deterioration in the outlook for Chinese demand even as China ramps up production of low-end semiconductors, and ongoing concerns about the sustainability of elevated AI-related demand. Nvidia and its supply chain partners have recently confirmed near-term commercial shipments of the next generation chips as well as that AI related demand continues to exceed supply. However, offsetting these positives, the China-related supply and demand outlook has deteriorated sharply. As a result, Axiom has reduced semiconductor exposure focusing on holdings competing at the highest technological specifications. Ironically, ex-semiconductors, China exposed stocks rallied very sharply this quarter from depressed levels as the Chinese government announced new stimulus measures in response to accelerating evidence that the property driven credit crisis is severely impacting China's economy. The recent Chinese policy announcements appear inadequate to sustainably offset the many structural headwinds and we made only modest, stock-specific changes to the portfolio. In general, outside the rally in China, global markets were led by interest rate sensitive and yield oriented stocks, including in the real estate, financial services, utilities, and consumer staples sectors as the Fed finally joined the easing cycle with a larger than expected 50 basis point cut. The global easing cycle started over one year ago and world-wide cuts are now running ahead of hikes by nearly five-to-one year-to-date. Axiom has generally been benefitting from easing over the past year, even though we lagged this quarter, and we have selectively added to well-positioned holdings.

From a sector perspective, the largest relative contributor during the quarter was energy, led by Reliance and Petrobras. Materials also contributed to performance due to our underweight. The main detractors for the quarter were information technology, consumer discretionary, and financials. Regarding information technology, memory semiconductor stocks were especially weak. Prices of memory semiconductors have started to soften, particularly for lower end applications. The softness is driven by weaker demand for PCs and smartphones, coupled with increasing supply out of China.

From a country perspective, the largest relative contributor Brazil, driven by Embraer. Other contributors included Mexico, due to positive performance from BBB Foods, and the Philippines, led by BDO Unibank and International Container Terminal Services. China, Korea, and India were the main detractors for the quarter. Chinese policy surprised the markets at the end of the quarter. Policy makers announced measures to address the accelerating Chinese economic slowdown. While the policy announcements were small relative to the size of the problem and seem insufficient to resolve the issues, the increased sense of urgency displayed by authorities drove a powerful 'short covering' rally in Chinese equities, especially distressed real estate stocks. As Chinese markets rallied, many well performing stocks in other markets, particularly in India and Korea, sold off and appear to have been funding sources for the Chinese trades. Moreover, this rally was funded by recent strong performance from our Korean and Indian holdings.

The largest stock specific relative contributors for the quarter were Embraer, MercadoLibre, Samsung Biologics, Zomato, and Tencent. The largest detractors on a relative basis were SK hynix, Wiwynn, NVIDIA, and DISCO.

Easing cycles are generally a tailwind for high quality, sustainable dynamic growth stocks and Axiom has historically outperformed during these cycles. Axiom's strategies are supported by strong balance sheets, enjoy attractive and above market growth, and benefit from rising earnings forecasts. Axiom continues to closely monitor macroeconomic and geopolitical developments. We remain focused on implementing our fundamental, forward-looking, evidence-based Dynamic Growth philosophy and process to steward client capital successfully through market cycles.
