Commentary

During the second quarter 2021, the Axiom Emerging Markets World Equity Strategy ("Strategy") outperformed the MSCI EM Index ("Index") net of fees. The Strategy remains ahead of the benchmark on a net of fees basis over the 1-year, 3-year, 5-year, and since inception periods.

Axiom's focus on ahead of the curve dynamic growth stock selection led to strong performance this quarter as growth stocks showed signs of resuming market leadership after several quarters of outperformance by value. The faster than expected economic recovery that unfolded over the past twelve months has been fueled by massive monetary and fiscal stimulus globally as well as by optimism surrounding the introduction of effective vaccines. The policy driven economic tailwinds supported a period of outperformance by cyclical and distressed value stocks since the 'COVID' bottom last spring. Key economic indicators have just started to tick down from record highs as credit momentum in major economies has begun to decline. For instance, the JP Morgan Composite World PMI has fallen from a record high of 58.5 in May to 56.6 in June. Within emerging markets, the broad macro indicators were somewhat mixed during the second quarter. EMBI spreads narrowed during the quarter from 323.9 to 312.5 while the JPM EM currency index strengthened slightly from 56.1 to 57.3. On the other hand, the emerging market PMI remained at 52.8 during the second quarter which is below the fourth quarter level of 54.1 with Chinese and other Asian PMIs showing a marked deceleration. In China, the credit tightening has been significant with the Chinese credit impulse turning negative only seven months after the peak last October. The pace of recovery appears to be peaking and the sharpest part of the economic re-acceleration seems to be behind us. Growth stocks have also been supported recently as concerns about elevated current inflation readings are now being offset by significant selloffs in many of the commodities that contributed to the rise in inflation. Within emerging markets this meant a resumption of leadership by growth stocks late in the second quarter that narrowed the outperformance of value over growth for the quarter to 65 bps.

The contributing sectors on a relative basis during the second quarter were consumer discretionary, led by top performing stock Li Ning, which is benefiting from improving Chinese sportswear spending trends and market share gains from foreign brands, communication services, led by strong performance from Kakao, and industrials, led by Contemporary Amperex, given the improved outlook for electric vehicle batteries. Financials, materials, and energy were the largest relative detractors for the quarter.

From a country perspective, China was the top contributor where Contemporary Amperex and Li Ning, mentioned above were joined by fellow outperformers Longi Green and Shenzhen Innovance. South Korea was a key country contributor driven by Kakao while the underweight in Naspers led to South Africa also being a top contributor. Top detractors included Brazil, where we saw a strong rotation from growth to value cyclicals. Taiwan was another top detractor given the underperformance of the Taiwanese tech sector.

From an individual stock perspective, the Strategy's best relative contributors were Li Ning, Contemporary Amperex, Kakao, Silergy, and Naspers. Detracting stocks for the quarter included TAL, Taiwan Semiconductor, Grupo Mexico, Kasikornbank, and Galaxy Entertainment.

We are optimistic about the outlook for our holdings and believe investors should be taking advantage of the recent value-stock rally to reinforce their allocation to dynamic growth equities. Investors appear poorly positioned for renewed outperformance by growth stocks. For instance, US mutual funds, where data is available, are currently exhibiting a record tilt toward value holdings according to Goldman Sachs. Investors might be chasing recent price performance at the expense of longer-term opportunity. Bloomberg reported that price momentum investors increased their cyclical/value exposure by about 50% and, perhaps as a result, the valuation spread between growth and value is already back to historical averages. The recent value rally has already exceeded the post financial crisis average by 25% suggesting a possible value rotation overshoot. We believe that fundamental investors who take advantage of the recent rotation to add dynamic growth stocks with long term potential will capture more of the upside. The market might be in the early stages of looking out towards slower economic growth in coming years and shifting back to favoring Axiom's ahead of the curve dynamic growth investments which continue to deliver superior and better than expected sustainable growth.
